Special Needs Co-Parenting Assessment Report™

A child-focused reflection built from an 8-section family assessment

Thank you for completing the SA CoParents™ Special Needs Co-Parenting Assessment.

This report is designed to help you identify your family's strengths, recognize opportunities for growth, and focus on practical strategies that support your child's well-being. It is not intended to diagnose any medical, psychological, educational, or developmental condition. Rather, it offers guidance to help co-parents work together more effectively while keeping the child's needs at the center of every decision.

OVERALL CO-PARENTING READINESS

Good Progress

Both parents demonstrate commitment to their child's needs. Strongest areas are Understanding the child and Medical & therapeutic care. Priority focus areas are Communication between parents and Parent collaboration readiness. Full findings for each of the eight assessment sections follow on the next page.

Assessment Findings by Section

Each of the eight sections is summarized below with its own rating and a brief finding.

SECTION 1
Understanding Your Child
Excellent

Both parents accept the child's diagnosis and can describe her core strengths and challenges. There is no significant disagreement about the developmental picture.

SECTION 2
Medical & Therapeutic Care
Good

Therapy attendance is consistent and both parents are aware of appointments. One parent is noticeably more familiar with the current treatment plan than the other.

SECTION 3
Educational Support
Fair

Both parents receive most school communications, but only one regularly attends ARD/IEP meetings. Homework routines differ between the two homes.

SECTION 4
Daily Living Consistency
Good

Meals, hygiene, and homework expectations are similar between homes. Bedtime, screen-time limits, and transition routines still vary.

SECTION 5
Communication Between Parents
Needs Improvement

Information about medications, sleep, and behavioral changes is shared inconsistently, usually only after a problem escalates. No shared calendar or communication app is in use today.

SECTION 6
Child Regulation & Transitions
Fair

The child shows anxiety before exchanges. Visual schedules and sensory supports are used in one home but not the other, producing a noticeable regulation drop after transitions.

SECTION 7
Parent Collaboration Readiness
Needs Improvement

Most disagreements are about day-to-day parenting decisions, not the diagnosis. Structured mediation or child-focused coaching is likely to help.

SECTION 8
Future Planning
Fair

Both parents share a positive long-term vision but have not yet documented decisions around middle-school placement, guardianship, adult services, or financial planning.

Strengths

- ✓ Both parents recognize the child's diagnosis.
- ✓ Therapy attendance is consistent.
- ✓ Parents share similar long-term goals.
- ✓ Both homes support educational success.

Areas to Improve

- Develop one shared therapy calendar.
- Create consistent bedtime routines.
- Improve communication about medications.
- Build a transition routine between homes.
- Prepare together for annual IEP meetings.

Personalized Recommendations

Based on your responses, consider exploring the following supports over the next several months.

- → Shared communication tools (calendar, app, notebook)
- → Parent coaching for co-parenting skills
- → Child-focused mediation
- → Family therapy
- → Occupational therapy consultation
- → Pediatric follow-up
- → Educational advocacy resources
- → Structured IEP / 504 planning support

SA COPARENTS™ DISTINGUISHING FEATURE

Child Impact Predictor

Rather than identifying areas of disagreement alone, the Child Impact Predictor estimates how differences between households may affect your child in practical, day-to-day areas. This shifts the focus away from blaming the other parent and toward understanding how specific co-parenting patterns influence the child's lived experience — consistent with SA CoParents™' guiding message.

Routines | School performance | Therapy participation | Emotional regulation | Transitions between homes

Child Needs Foundation Statement

Instead of ending on a numeric score, the SA CoParents™ assessment closes with a shared, child-centered statement both parents can return to during future decisions and mediation.

FOUNDATION STATEMENT

Our commitment to our child

"Our child benefits from predictable routines, coordinated medical care, consistent educational support, and calm communication between parents. We recognize that although our parenting styles may differ, our shared responsibility is to provide stability, reduce unnecessary conflict, and support our child's developmental, emotional, and educational needs. We commit to making decisions that prioritize our child's well-being and to seeking professional guidance whenever needed."

What Happens Next in the SA CoParents App

- Review this assessment and save it to your dashboard.
- Complete your personalized Foundation Statement.
- Build your Child Needs Statement for mediation.
- Create your Co-Parenting Commitment.
- Prepare shared materials for mediation, IEP, or medical meetings.
- Reassess after significant changes in your child's needs.

IMPORTANT REMINDER

Every child develops differently. This report is educational and informational only. It is not a psychological evaluation, medical diagnosis, therapy, or legal advice. If you have concerns regarding your child's development, learning, behavior, or safety, consult the appropriate healthcare provider, educational professional, therapist, or attorney.

Every positive step you take toward cooperation strengthens your child's foundation for success.